Call for Papers:

We welcome papers suggesting new models for the study of religious mixing, drawing on data from all time periods and geographic locations. Topics to consider include, but are not limited to: Hellenistic Judaism, Roman evocatio, religions of late antiquity, the three teachings in China, religions in the Atlantic world, African diaspora religions, Japanese new religions, theosophy, Unitarian Universalism, and global Pentecostal movements. Participants are expected to use evidence from their areas of specialization to inform a more general dialogue about terminological and theoretical problems and horizons in the study of religious mixing.

Please send paper titles and abstracts (300 words or less) to RemixingReligion@gmail.com. Please include your name, institutional and departmental affiliation, and email address.

Abstracts due by November 27, 2013
