Applications are now being accepted for Fall 2016 for the masters & PhD programs in Health Behavior & Health Education at the University of Texas at Austin, focusing on understanding health behavior and promoting health. Our programs are interdisciplinary and we welcome students from a broad range of backgrounds. The faculty conduct research in child and adolescent health, physical activity, obesity prevention, substance use prevention, risk and resiliency, diabetes management, women’s health, and successful aging.